OVER COOPER
PARDON CASE

11 ARE DEAD
FROM POISON
AT WESTERLY

WESTLEY, R. L., April 14.—The extremely mysterious death in the series now under investigation as the result of the discovery that whiskey containing wood alcohol has been sold here occurred today. Rosena Tatti, an Italian laborer, was taken ill suddenly at 6 a. m. to-day and died three hours later in agony. Medical Examiner Stanton is working on this new case.

The death to-day of Tatti came within a few hours of that of Daniel T. Sullivan, the tenth victim at his home in White Rock, adjoining this town.

Attorney-General William B. Greengard of New York is presumably superintending the inquiry. He is doing everything that he can to help the Connecticut authorities at the same time, for fully half of the deaths now attributed to food poisoning is thought to have taken place in Pawtucket and Stonington, just across the State line.

Two States at Work.

Attorney-General Greenough's reports have been of such character that to-day the State Pure Food Commissions of both Rhode Island and Connecticut and officials of the national government sent officials here to help run down and bring to justice those responsible for the adulteration of food. It is believed to have caused the majority of the eleven sudden deaths in this community.

Sullivan was taken violently ill yesterday afternoon and died before he could be called to the hospital.

In three hours the man was dead. His son, Timothy, has been trying in vain to find out where his father bought the liquor which killed him. Daniel Sullivan refused to reveal anything.

Medical Examiner J. Howard Morgan, who was called in, took charge of the half-pint bottle in which the "whiskey was purchased and which still contains a couple of mouthfuls of the liquor. He has sent this to a chemist for analysis.

NO PROSECUTION OF MEN HIGHER UP

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Secretary MacVane of the Treasury Department said today: "There will be no further prosecution of men higher up in either the sugar frauds or customs frauds cases. The customs service will be completely rebuilt, and more improvements made than have heretofore been accomplished. Of course, should prominent men in either the sugar or customs cases be found to have violated the law they will be prosecuted vigorously but the administration contemplates no action against any prominent men. Judging from investigations that have been made so far.

HOLY POOLERS AGAIN IN HOT END OF WORLD

DENVER, April 14.—The end of the world is coming again, according to the claims of the Holy Poolers, and hundreds of these fanatics are gathering here today to prepare for the expected event. This meeting of the world is to be "without fail."

June 21 is the date set by Miss Dr. Watson for the world's finish. Her sources claim that "something terrible is to happen on June 21."

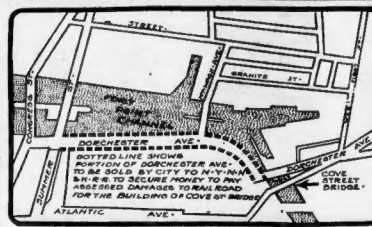

"On June 21 the sun will rise and the earth will be covered with fire," she says. "The signs are everywhere. The sun will be of special significance on that day. It will be of special significance on that day. It will be of special significance on that day."

It is expected that over 1,000 of the fanatics will be here for the occasion. These fanatics will be here for the occasion. These fanatics will be here for the occasion. These fanatics will be here for the occasion.

We Wear Tremont In the Good Clothes Game

The Good Clothes "Fans" of Boston have come to regard the Tremont as the "homeplate" of fashion. They know that they can always "score" here on good style, good quality and good values. Come, you be the "umpire" when it comes to comparison between our splendid suits and those of the average store. We'll willingly abide by your "decision."

The men we clothe in this store are well dressed men; not always when they come to us, but always after that as long as they continue to let us look after their clothes.

Hart, Schaffner & Marx

make clothes for well dressed men; for men who appreciate quality; for men who are as much or more interested in what they get for their money as in what they pay.

This store is the natural headquarters for such men, and if you haven't yet found it out, you're doing yourself an injustice in the matter of clothes that we're sorry for.

Come in soon and see what we're doing here to dress our fellow citizens. All-wool fabrics, fine tailoring, correct style and fit. Hart, Schaffner & Marx Suits $20, $22, $25, $28, $30 and $35.

Young Men's Suits at $15

The young men nowadays do some pretty daring things in clothes wearing. We don't believe in going too far in these matters; but we believe in meeting the requirements of these dressy young fellows within reason. So we want the young men to see the new April models we have had designed for us to sell at $15, a type of young men's suits which are bringing us the trade of the young men of Boston.

Tremendous Values in $20 Suits

Our suits at $20 contain $5 more actual value than any other $20 suits on the Boston market. This we know by investigation. You, too, may know how true this is if you'll but come and make us prove it. And at this price we carry more different styles, sizes, patterns and fabrics than the average store carries at all prices. Now, that's important—tremendously so. It means that no man need turn away in disappointment because he can't find exactly what he wants in a suit at Twenty Dollars.

ANIMALS MISSING BY ROOSEVELT

GOAT RATES LAMB FROM EAGLE. STOCKBROKER, April 14.—President Charles B. Moore's sheep are safe, for the dozen Agassiz goats which he recently imported from abroad have proved their great value already. While Mr. and Mrs. Moore, together with "Dinner" and "Jim" Brady of New York, were inspecting the goats, one of the goats was suddenly an immense eagle swooped down from the sky and dropped on a lamb. Instantly an enormous "thump" was heard as the eagle landed on the lamb, which was carried away and the lamb was left on the ground. The goats were then taken to the farm of Mr. Brady, where they were kept for some time.

TAFT GIVES WELCOME TO SUFFRAGISTS

CYMRIC HERE,
BRINGING MRS.
TOM THUMB

WASHINGTON, April 14.—What stand will President Taft take in regard to votes for women when he opens the National American Suffrage Association convention with an address of welcome? The convention assembles this afternoon. President Taft speaking this evening.

When the other passengers were ducking in response to the loud warning of "low bridge" as they were making the exit from the White Star liner Cymara, which docked to-day in Boston for the first time in four months, the Countess Mary, thirty-two inches high, formerly Mrs. To Thumb, got by without bending her above ager conjecture by everyone directly or indirectly interested in the big movement for the ballot box for women that is to begin a new chapter with this nation's suffraging. Will the President come out that footed for equal suffrage, or will he merely welcome the hosts of suffragists to Washington and skip lightly over the one prevailing issue that brings them here? Is the fact that he consented to address the convention proof that he is favorably inclined toward the cause? If he comes

The warning became necessary because the White Star steamship docked at the Cunard line docks in East Boston, instead of at her own pier in Charlestown, was a case of misent with the Cunard at its new docking place, and hence the steamer officials had to see that the tax or passengers did not bump their heads.

These questions and more along the same lines were fired back and forth between the two men. In any event the answer of Mr. Tatt was intended to win the approval of the audience. He said he was not so sanguine that favorable "character" would be emphasized on many a "white" man's tombstone. On the other hand, President Tatt has let it be known that he will not because he is so address his audience. He does not seem particularly interested in the subject.

Anna Howard Shaw, ex-president of the association, presided over the convention. The association has been in existence for 10 years. It was organized in 1904 and today that Rev. Dr. Stacey will be president. The association is a national one and will not meet this year, again.

and began with Boston," she said. "I was in the company for 12 years, but from two years' success on the London and Paris stage beginning in 1891, I came to Boston. There I was in Middleboro. The Gaiety were a tall set, Prince Albert, lavender trousers and a top hat. I was in the company for a year with no less cost. After visiting Boston, I came to make a tour on the Randolph circuit."

The Gaiety came to dock with practicality. The ship was a 100-ton boat of paint and a new liner, to celebrate its return from the port of Boston. There was a large party on board, with a band and 1,014 steerage passengers.

Those in the steerage represented every nation and nationality. The passengers were spoken on the way out. There were also 31 head of Ayshire on board, who were taken to Greenfield, N. H., who was a passenger.

YOU KNOW JUST HOW IT HAPPENS

Disgraceful and Shameful Conditions in the Schools

Schoolhouse conditions exist in Boston that are disgraceful and shameful. We have some fine school buildings that are adequate for their districts and some mighty poor ones that are overcrowded, unhealthful and dangerous.

At least 7,000 pupils are improperly housed. A number of buildings are veritable firetraps and others are so unsanitary that they are positively unhealthful and menacing to the health of the children.

The School Committee, after a thorough study of the conditions, has decided that it will take about $1,500,000 to remedy this state of affairs and replace the old shacks and makeshifts that are being used with up-to-date buildings equipped with essentials for the comfort and safety of the scholars. It would seem the part of common sense to provide the money for these schoolhouse reforms.

Why wait for an epidemic of disease or a fire, with their sad crops of deaths? Life and health are not to be measured with the dollar and cents rule. The School Committee has tried two expedients to raise the necessary money. The first was a bill to the Legislature asking for the right to issue three sets of $500,000 bonds.

The legislative committee that heard the arguments for the bill has reported against it. The Finance Commission has gone on record against the proposition and has pointed out that, under a special law, the School Committee may vote to take a tax levy of 40 cents on every $1,000 of the city's valuation.

Believing that the Legislature will not pass the loan bill and that the money must be had the committee has taken the plunge and has voted to take the special tax levy. The Mayor may veto the committee's action, but the committee, in turn, may override the veto by a two-thirds vote. Taking this money does not mean, necessarily, that the tax rate would be raised 40 cents, inasmuch as there are economies of administration that might be practiced to largely offset it.

Taking advantage of the 40-cent privilege would give the School Committee about $530,000 a year. In three years all the improvements needed could be made. Summed up the schoolhouse situation presents itself as follows:

Schools are overcrowded and dangerous to life and health. There are 1,100 pupils in rented quarters, for which the city is paying about $25,000 a year. The saving of this sum alone, capitalized, is the saving of more than $600,000, or more than the whole appropriation asked for. As a piece of sensible financing this saving should strongly recommend the plan of the School Committee.

About 4,700 children are housed in the small, single-room portable buildings which fill up the space which the children should have for play and recreation. Superintendent Brooks has figured out that there are more than 9,000 children in these portables in excess of the number that should be there.

It is not proposed to abandon the portables altogether, but to use them as sitting places for the immigrant children, until it can be determined how far advanced they are and in which grades they belong. That is another sensible idea.

In halls and corridors instructors are trying to teach the young ideas of some 1,400 children who go to school.

Basements are being utilized for school rooms, and some of them, as, for instance, the basement of the Washington School in the West End, are particularly bad places for the children to occupy for five minutes, to say nothing of five hours.

The elimination of the hall as a general meeting place means the leaving out of very important exercises from the conduct of any such school.

About 2,000 children are in unit buildings. For instance, the Prescott School in Charlestown has been condemned by the State Board of Health as dangerous to life and health with the remark that, if the Board had the power, it would tear the building down.

In the Austin School in East Boston the tide rises and falls in the basement, the lower rooms are so dark that artificial light is required at all hours, the roof and walls leak so that books cannot be kept in the bookcases and the paint has run in streaks. There are two wooden staircases with a furnace under each.

The Baldwin School in the West End is in a sort of blue grotto among stables, with a theatre on one side and the Wayfarer lodge, where the tramps perform, on the other. The sky on one side of the building is a small square patch as if seen from the bottom of a well.

The Way street school building is not so very bad in itself, but it is situated in a sort of inferno with the sulphurous fumes of coal gas from the locomotives that are constantly puffing up and down the street or so railway tracks directly underneath it, taking the place of air.

It is also a fact, though it does not represent so dire a necessity as the cases cited above, that there are in the crowded parts of the city about 2,000 children in excess of the 44 per cent, to which the number in the fortunate districts has been reduced. It is self-evident that it is not a square deal for the children in some districts to be denied the opportunity which children in other districts are getting and which is necessary to their receiving full value in the way of education.

Keenly impressed with the justice of that conclusion the School Committee has decided to invoke the benefit of the special 40-cent tax. It believes in building for the future, but also in taking care of the present. For that reason it takes issue with those who urge that this thing will be caught up with in the future without the aid of this special appropriation.

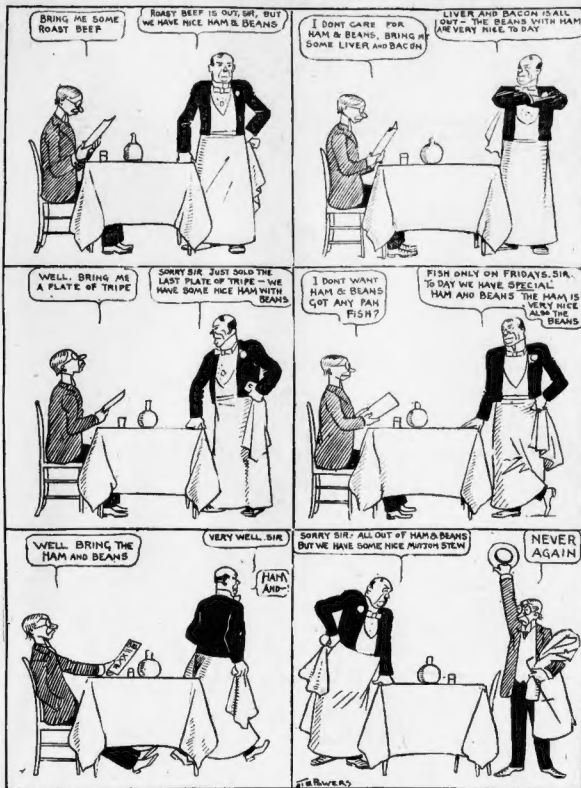

The committee's answer to the advocates of a stingy policy is that it will cost as much in money to wait as it will to go ahead now, and it will cost a great deal more in children—a sound policy that should commend itself to every father and mother with children in the schools and to every man and woman having the good name of Boston at heart.

It does not do the child that dies of tuberculosis this year any good to have a sanitary building provided for his younger brother ten years hence, nor, if he has lost even one year out of the ten precious years on which his future usefulness so largely depends by sitting in a schoolroom filled with carbonic dioxide instead of air, is it any consolation to him to know that future generations may be better treated.

Of a similar present character is Sheridan's "Rivals" remark: "Then I shall be dead and you can go and kiss the undertaker."

Knowing the real conditions and realizing their serious import, there is but one alternative for the School Committee, either to leave the children to suffer from the present bad buildings or to use the money which the law says may be appropriated for the purpose of constructing new school buildings.

Again we say, in the practice of municipal economy, let us take proper consideration the value of human life and health. If the School Committee needs the money it asks for, and should have it. It is a disgraceful and shameful feature of

Picking Out the Pippins

A LITTLE JOB FOR NEW ENGLAND'S "BOOSTERS"

By MERTON E. BURKE

CHILDREN of wonderfully enormous sized apples from the so-called "pippin" orchards have been secured within the past few days.

Comparatively few people have TASTED of these, but it is a pretty safe proposition that, after your curiosity had been satisfied, you'd pick out the good New England pippins every time. If offered your choice.

There are a good many New Englanders who'll admit that New England apples are better than the prettier shinned Western apples, but they sometimes do not realize that they are just as MARKETINGABLE. Sometimes we are not appreciative of our home products and industries—and that's why it is important that all loyal New Englanders become "boosters."

This section once furnished one-half the orchard supply of the entire country. The other day I saw Oregon apples to

A man I know in Maine bought thirty-five acres at $20 an acre, planting them with apples. In 1907 he harvested 12,000 bushels, netting $5 per bushel. He sold the property for $20,000.

Another man bought three acres at $20, planted apples and last year gathered 194 barrels. The owner refused $1,000 for his property.

There is a six-acre orchard of which I know, planted thirty years ago and since then having received no cultivation. Last year the crop was 400 barrels, which brought $2 a barrel.

The commercial opportunity of fruit raising in New England is not utilized to the extent of one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Thirty-nine per cent. of the fruit brought for consumption in New England is raised in the South and West. All of this might our market retelling at $1 a dozen, while the New England product was labelled at seven cents a dozen.

Something appears to have happened. In some sections of New England the orchardists are beginning to appreciate the unequalled possibilities of fruit culture, and the next few years promise wonders.

At the present time more than one-half the orchards of New England receive no care at all, beyond a haphazard "pruning" in the Spring and a harvest of "elder apples" in the Fall. Each farmer does his little cultivation independently. But the wonderful results of co-operation—as evidenced in the Oregon orchard district—are beginning to make their effect felt in the East.

In the raising of apples the prime factors are rainfall, hillside, forest cleared land, good application, and the final factors are grading, labeling and packing.

The prime factors have the secondary factors are a matter of study and intelligent application, and the final factors are ours for the effort.

No profits can be made without the earning, whether in Oregon or New England.

For quick increase in land valuation nothing exceeds orchardism.

he relied on our own farms—as well as more for exportation. Peaches, plums, cherries and the small fruits can be grown profitably in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and parts of New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine.

All of the garden truck which now comes from Florida, Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey and New York can be raised in New England.

Instead of calling upon the South for these supplies, let us look about us, cultivating them.

Two men, who have reclaimed a rocky "barren" farm on Pa. from Boston, have cleaned up $2,500 a year for the past ten years, combining their agriculture to only garden truck.

The farmers of Arlington have made their county the richest garden truck district in the whole country.

The soil of Arlington is no better than that of other sections of these States. The OPPORTUNITIES are here, and what is more, the MARKET is here.

New England is the gatekeeper of the West and South.

Just now, it would seem, New England needs most a little "boosting" in the way of self-appreciation of its possibilities.

Are YOU a "Booster"?

How Pa Dyed His Hair

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examined

WELL, and Ma, when Pa came home last night, what in the world is the matter with his hair?

What is the matter with it? I said Pa. His hair began to look awful red. I never before noticed that it was so red. I was so used to seeing it so black, I didn't notice it was so red.

I think I saw some of the red hair when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard.

I will tell you, and Pa, I will tell you the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. You see, I was talking with my mother last night, and she told me that Pa had dyed his hair.

How did you know that? I said Pa. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard.

Well, and Pa, I got to thinking that I was a little bit of a fool. I was a little bit of a fool. I was a little bit of a fool. I was a little bit of a fool.

I will tell you, and Pa, I will tell you the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. You see, I was talking with my mother last night, and she told me that Pa had dyed his hair.

turned true. Does it look so bad? said Pa. You ought to see Jack McLaughlin's hair.

It looks terrible. I said Pa. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard.

Then Ma began to laugh, and the more she laughed the more Pa laughed. I said Pa. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard. I saw it when I was out in the yard.
